

Daniel Wild – Personal Profile.

I am a 21 year-old Masters student reading International Political Economics at the University of Sussex. Primarily raised and educated in Dorset, I had the pleasure of being introduced to East Dean and Friston in 2016. I now live here permanently and I am in awe of such a fantastic village community and the beautiful British countryside. Outside of my academic studies, I enjoy playing a number of sports including golf, tennis, and cricket. As a spectator, I enjoy cricket, football and rugby. My prospective career plans within politics introduced me to the possibility of being involved with the Parish Council and I am excited to be working in such a proactive institution. As a Councillor, I believe I will bring a new perspective that combines both the preservation of traditional values alongside the promotion of modernisation in some suitable aspects. One of the most important innovations for me is greater engagement with the younger generations in the village and therefore I would promote an increased social media presence for the Council. I am tremendously honoured and excited to be a Parish Councillor and look forward to working for East Dean and its marvellous residents.

Daniel joined the Parish Council in January 2020.
